PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

This seminar will be interactive with adequate time for discussion and comments following each speaker's presentation. The interactive component will comprise at least 25% of the sessions.

An audience polling app will be utilized as a form of interactive discussion and testing.

Target Audience

- Anatomical and General Pathologists
- Postgraduate Residents and Fellows

Learning Objectives

This case-based approach to pathology will go beyond looking at the basics and delve into the clinical and practical relevance of our diagnoses.

At the end of this session, participants will be able to:

- Identify key diagnostic features and work-up of endometrial mesenchymal tumors on biopsies and resections
- Develop a diagnostic approach to morphologically challenging ovarian tumour, including the use of molecular testings in tumor classification
- Discuss recent updates on vulvar lesions and their implications for clinical management
